- NJIT is now accepting applications for the Provost Doctoral Assistantship Program. Holders of these assistantships will be given instructional assignments within their school/college relating to the retention of first-year students. Each awardee will receive full tuition, fees and stipend ($26,000/academic year) for his/her first two academic years of graduate study.
- The highest-ranked two candidates will be awarded the Gary Thomas Assistantship and will receive a supplemental award in the amount of $2,000 in academic years 3 and 4.
- To maintain the assistantship, awardees must adhere to all assistantship expectations and academic criteria as determined by the Office of Graduate Studies. For each of academic years 3 and 4 of the assistantship, the recipients are expected to receive externally funded research support from their dissertation advisor.
- Applicants must include a statement in their Ph.D. application stating their qualifications as instructors. Prior instructional experience and a list of research topics of interest to the applicant must be listed as well. The application deadline is December 15, 2019.
