NALGEP Webinar in Partnership with NJIT, KSU, and CCLR a success!

In partnership with NJIT, KSU, and CCLR, NALGEP presented a webinar on November 17th which provided guidance to prospective ARC Grantees on how to write a successful proposal. Experts from each of the partners provided key tricks of the trade for writing successful grant proposals. The webinar focused on how to maximize proposal points and avoid common mistakes, including:

- What's new with the FY 2016 grant guidelines;

- The importance of building community support for a brownfield grant proposal; and
- Special tips for disadvantaged and small/rural communities.

A total of 223 participants from throughout the nation participated in the live webinar, and many more whom were unable to participate that day have since downloaded the webinar to view on their own, via NJIT's TAB website which archives all of its TAB related webinars. The recorded webinar is available here: <http://www5.njit.edu/tab/webinars>.

NJIT provided the platform for the webinar, free of charge and provided EPA headquarters with a participant registration report. NJIT discussed tips applicable to all of the ARC grant proposals, including the importance of community participation, and developing a cohesive theme that differentiates a community's proposal from the hundreds of others that USEPA receives.
